PENNSYLVANIA IS NOT TO OBSERVE A BANK HOLIDAY

High Officials Give Promise After Enacting Measure

A NEW STRUCTURE

Every Bank in State May Plan for 100% Liquid Deposits

By Joseph A. Loftus

HARRISBURG, Feb. 28.—(INS)—Pennsylvania will have no bank holiday.

The state's highest officials gave that promise today after enacting a measure which provides the banks with foundations upon which to rear a new financial structure and solidify the old.

Beginning today, every Pennsylvania bank may set up a plan whereby all future deposits shall be kept on hundred per cent liquid. Incoming funds will be segregated from previously existing accounts and will be available to depositors immediately upon demand. Adoption of the plan is optional with the individual bank. The effect is to allow limited withdrawals on old accounts and unlimited withdrawals on new accounts.

Moving swiftly and dramatically, the Legislature in a night session consumed barely an hour in formally effecting strategic measures designed to ease the strain on the financial houses of the state. The emergency banking plan is similar in principle to that adopted recently by New Jersey.

A state assembly ordinarily torn by factional politics approved the resolution establishing the plan with a unanimity unprecedented in Pennsylvania in recent years.

Affixing his signature one minute after midnight today, Gov. Gifford Pinchot declared that the resolution "makes it unnecessary to declare a moratorium for Pennsylvania banks. There will be no such moratorium."

Under the terms of the joint resolution, the State Secretary of Banking "is authorized and directed not to take possession of any bank because of its decision not to meet in full" its liabilities for prior deposits, provided the bank is able to continue on a paying and liquid basis regarding all deposits accepted after it adopts the plan.

Meanwhile, the liabilities previously existing could be gradually liquidated as the bank's resources on old accounts permit. Where a bank adopts the plan, the secretary of banking will determine the percentage of payments which may be made on old deposits just as he has been doing in the case of banks he has closed and taken into the possession of the state.

While the plan is available to all banks in Pennsylvania, both state and national, it is intended as a prop for the weaker institutions, which will adopt it to prevent failures.

"Unquestionably," said Governor Pinchot, only a small minority of the banks of Pennsylvania will at this time find it advisable to take advantage of the terms of the joint resolution. How few are compelled to do so will depend on the restraint and co-operation of their depositors.

"This action is taken to safeguard the mass of Pennsylvania depositors from suffering from the needless desire of hysterical depositors to withdraw their funds. It should also preclude the immediate calling of many loans and the hasty foreclosure of many mortgages which otherwise would be unavoidable."

In a prepared statement to the press, Governor Pinchot explained the banking plan in part as follows:

"The small number of banks affected by this resolution will, upon application to the secretary of banking, be authorized to set up two kinds of accounts:

"1. Balances existing before the bank applies for such authority. These may not be withdrawn in full immediately, but may be withdrawn in such proportion, if any, as the Secretary of Banking approves.

"2. New balances created by deposits made after the application shall be received. These new balances must be one hundred per cent liquid and can be withdrawn in full at any time.

"The people of Pennsylvania may safely draw from their banks the money they need for current expenses. Cashing checks for this purpose is not what endangers the banks. It is the demand for large sums for hoarding which makes the trouble."

The resolution was formally placed before the assembly at 11 o'clock last night.

FORD'S SECRETARY MISSING

Detroit, Mich., Feb. 28.—E. G. Leibold, secretary to Henry Ford, motor magnate, is missing, police today were informed. Harry Bennett, Ford Motor Company executive, asked the aid of Detroit police in finding him. Leibold, one of the most prominent men in Detroit motor circles, has been Ford's secretary for 20 years. He has been one of Ford's chief aides in the present banking situation.

CRISIS EXPECTED IN CUBA BEFORE SUMMER

Machado Group and Opposition Watching Each Other Like Hawks

APPARENT QUIET NOW

(This is the sixth and last of a series of stories based on a first-hand survey of present conditions in Cuba. To avoid possible censorship, the stories were written and sent from Miami.)

By George R. Holmes

MIAMI, Fla., Feb. 28.—(INS)—A crisis in Cuban affairs is expected by Americans in the island to be reached some time before mid-summer—on the Roosevelt administration.

For the moment, things are relatively quiet, with the dictatorial government of President Machado and the implacable opposition watching each other like hawks, and always with one eye on the possibility of American intervention.

Both sides are waiting to see the crystallization of Roosevelt's policy under the Platt Amendment, which gives the United States the right to intervene in the island's affairs at any time for the maintenance of a government "capable of protecting life, property and individual liberty."

Under existing conditions in Cuba there is little protection of either, except where Americans and other foreigners are concerned. Both sides have confined their killings and assassinations to Cubans. The government through its "experts" or secret police, and the oppositionists through their secret society known by the cryptic symbol of "ABC". The enemies are wholly Cuban.

Here in Miami, and in New York and Washington, are Cuban juntas, composed mainly of exiles who fled the island after opposition activities against the dictatorial powers assumed by President Machado.

Recently, an agent of one of the largest munition firms in the United States spent considerable time in Havana. He was not there solely on vacation, and it reports about Havana are to be believed he was in contact with both sides.

Having suspended all constitutional guarantees, closed the national university and the high schools, enforced martial law, and a strict press censorship, President Machado is for the present master of the situation.

He has a well equipped and efficiently trained army of some 12,000 men.

COMMUNICATION

To Whom It May Concern:

The pessimists of Croydon who have so much leisure time for writing of anonymous letters would do well to investigate some of their own affairs of which they are better versed, and be certain all those mentioned in their letters are on the relief.

Take the time you give in anonymous letter writing to investigate, and not incriminate people with something they are innocent of; and then learn the important details of which you are ignorant pertaining to relief work.

When you have anything to report you will find me at home every Wednesday evening from 6.30 to 8.30. Then I want the names of the people involved, and will use your name when I investigate.

I am sorry the unemployed are disturbing your rest and that you are ashamed to reveal your name. Such letters are a joke. Until you have the courage to sign your name I would not waste any more stamps.

CERMAK HOLDING OWN

Chicago, Ill., Feb. 28.—The latest device for administering oxygen was being rushed today by airplane to Mayor Anton J. Cermak at Miami. The apparatus feeds the oxygen to the patient in humidified form through a rubber tube and will spare Mayor Cermak the restlessness he has suffered under the oxygen tank.

Miami, Fla., Feb. 28.—Dr. Sterling Nichols, coming from Mayor Cermak's room at 8.30 a. m., e. s. t., today, said: "Mayor Cermak is holding his own in his struggle to live. He will live another 24 hours I believe, and that adds to his chances for ultimate recovery because of the strength which he should gain in that period."

MATSUOKA TO VISIT AMERICA

(Copyright, 1933, I. N. S.)

Paris, France, Feb. 28.—In a swift reversal of decision, Yosuke Matsuoka, who was Japan's delegate to the League of Nations, revealed to close friends today his intentions of returning to Tokyo via the United States. He will arrive in New York, March 22nd, aboard the liner "Europa," an unimpeachable source disclosed today.

Yesterday, Matsuoka let it be known that Secretary of State Stimson's action in approving the League's condemnation of Japan's military activities had caused him to change his plans and give up his proposed visit to the United States. He was then reported "offended" by the State Department's note approving the League's Manchurian report because of Japan's withdrawal from the League Assembly.

This significant change in Matsuoka's plans was revealed exclusively to I. N. S. by a Japanese source close to the diplomat, although sources of correspondents at Matsuoka's hotel were officially informed "Mr. Matsuoka has no statement to make, but here is a possibility he may make a statement late today."

FORMER KAISER LIVES AS IN THE PAST

Has Tiny "Make-Believe" Imperial Court at Doorn Castle

IN FEUDAL SETTING

(The former Kaiser of all the Germans—what is he like today, how does he live? This is the first of a series of six articles by Edward Hunter, brilliant staff correspondent of International News Service, giving a fresh, intimate picture of the ex-Kaiser in his theatre-like "court" at Doorn.)

By Edward Hunter
(I. N. S. Staff Correspondent)

DOORN, Holland, Feb. 28.—I can sympathize with "Alice Through the Looking Glass." She must have felt somewhat as I felt while staying in this ancient woodland village. Elsewhere it is 1933. Here it is 1913. Elsewhere one speaks of the ex-Kaiser. Here it would be a faux pas to allude to him in any way except as Kaiser.

The former German sovereign himself is the chief protagonist in this stage play. He is surrounded by the same type of sycophants and palace courtiers as at Potsdam, and occupies the same exalted position. Doorn Palace is a small edition of an imperial estate of medieval times.

The residence of the ex-ruler himself is surrounded by a broad moat. A single bridge reaches from the outer edge to the main entrance, a revival of the drawbridge of ancient castles. Another moat surrounds the entire castle grounds, and brambles reach across the surface of the water. A wire fence, tall as a medium-sized man runs parallel to the moat, and three strings of barbed wire on top of the fence make egress even more difficult.

But like everything else at Doorn, this is but the shadow of what was in the past, for the moat around the grounds is not too wide for a man to leap across, and the imperial court consists of only about thirty retainers, from palace marshal to gardener.

But the difference is not in quality, but in size. Everything recalls the days of naval reviews and real authority. Doorn Castle was reconstructed for the ex-Kaiser according

Four Kinds of Card Games Played at School Benefit

The card party last evening in Elks' Home, sponsored by the faculty of Bristol High School, proved to be a success. There were 26 tables of players arranged. The games played were pinochle, "500," contract and auction bridge, and many prizes were given. Games were played in periods of 20 minutes, giving the contestants an opportunity of running exceedingly high scores.

The five highest contestants and scores in each game were: Pinochle—Mrs. John Wicher, 964; W. E. DeGroot, Jr., 953; Joseph Tingle, 928; Alfred Moffo, 925; Victor Rockhill, 921. Contract bridge—G. W. Wright, 4870; Laura Wright, 4800; Miss Henrietta Davis, 4610; Miss Bock, 4540; Miss I. Paulus, 4460.

"500"—Mrs. J. A. McIlvaine, 8220; Miss Elizabeth Brennan, 6530; Mrs. William DeGroot, Jr., 6110; Mrs. A. Popkin, 5890; Miss Esther Boyle, 5820. Auction bridge—Mr. Utz, 3365; Miss Eleanor Clements, 2743; Mrs. L. Smith, 2618; Mrs. H. Straus, 2528; Mrs. Charles Boyd, 2437.

NINETY CENTS OBTAINED WHEN MAN IS HELD UP

James McNulty, 323 Washington Street, is The Victim

EN ROUTE TO HIS WORK

The police announced today that James McNulty, 323 Washington street, was held-up early yesterday morning and robbed of 90 cents, all of the cash he had upon his person at the time.

The hold-up, according to the police, occurred on Canal street, near the Grundy mill.

McNulty is employed at the Grundy mill and was enroute to his employment at about five o'clock yesterday morning. He was approached by a rough appearing man who poked a gun at him and ordered him to hand over his cash.

Only a meager description has been given to the police by McNulty.

High Scorer at Card Party is Daniel Smith

JURY TO GET RUN CASE

Philadelphia, Feb. 28.—The jury in the Federal Court is expected to receive for deliberation today, the alleged $5,000,000 rum ring conspiracy in which 12 defendants have been on trial the past three weeks. Twenty-four of the original thirty-six defendants have pleaded guilty. Special Deputy Attorney General S. A. Keys was to finish his address to the jury this morning after which Congressman Benjamin Golder will make his plea for the defense. Judge George A. Welsh will then deliver the charge. None of the defendants took the witness stand, thus allowing Golder the right to make the final speech to the jury.

ATTORNEY MAY ASK NEW TRIAL FOR ARNwine

J. Leslie Kilcoyne Requests Four Days in Which to Present Motion

REQUEST IS GRANTED

DOYLESTOWN, Feb. 28.—Motion for a new trial for Charles Arnwine, 25, Newtown, convicted yesterday of the murder of Frances Remper, 15, also of Newtown, is likely to be filed by his attorney, J. Leslie Kilcoyne, Bristol.

"Guilty in the first degree with life imprisonment," was the jury's verdict. The jury had been out 2 hours and 27 minutes.

After the verdict of the jury had been received, Mr. Kilcoyne yesterday asked that the jury be polled, and each juror was required to rise in his place and repeat the verdict in full. Then Mr. Kilcoyne asked for the customary four days in which to present a motion for a new trial and ten days in which to prepare his appeal, which was granted.

The verdict was announced by John J. Lippincott, 27, foreman of the jury. "Gentlemen of the jury, have you agreed upon a verdict? How say you in the issue joined between the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania and Charles Arnwine?"

Lippincott, manifestly nervous and ill at ease, replied: "Guilty in the first degree with life imprisonment."

"You find the defendant, Charles Arnwine, guilty of murder in the first degree and you fix the punishment at life imprisonment? So say all of you?" the clerk asked. Some of the jurors replied "We do," and others merely nodded their heads in affirmation.

As Lippincott pronounced the word "guilty," a low moan came from Arnwine's sister. She slumped in her chair, while a woman friend tried to quiet her. But her cries grew louder and she was rapidly succumbing to hysteria when court officers carried her from the room.

Judge Keller thanked the jurors for their service and complimented them on their fidelity. Within two minutes the flurry of receiving the Arnwine verdict was over and the routine of the court trial was again under way. Arnwine was already back in prison.

Mr. and Mrs. Charles Remper, parents of the slain girl, made no demonstration whatever as the verdict was received. They have not missed a minute of the trial, but the moment the verdict was recorded they slipped quietly from the courtroom, entered their automobile, and started back home.

The jurors unanimously declined to explain how they had arrived at fixing the punishment as life imprisonment or to discuss the case in any way. They said they had been warned by the court not to discuss their deliberations.

But a moment later, in an ante-room as Sheriff Horace Gwinner was slipping a handcuff on his wrist, tears were in the youth's eyes despite his effort to appear stoic.

"Do you think you got a break?" Sheriff Gwinner asked.

"H—," replied Arnwine, "it might just as well have been the other way." To a reporter who flung a question at him, he replied: "I guess I haven't got much to say."

NORMAN H. MOORE, A PEACE JUSTICE, GOES ON TRIAL

Charged With Forcible Entry and Malicious Mischief by Mrs. Mary Crawford

TESTIMONY BY WOMAN

Moore Admits He Had Had Beers and Also Some Highballs

DOYLESTOWN, Feb. 28.—Norman H. Moore, 29, Langhorne Manor, justice of the peace charged with forcible entry and malicious mischief went on trial yesterday afternoon. He described himself as a newspaper man employed by the Curtis-Martin newspapers, Philadelphia.

He told in Court how he accompanied state police and other officers on raids and then said "and had one or two high-balls and a beer or two."

Mrs. Mary Crawford, whose apartment he is charged with forcibly entering, took the stand and testified that on the morning of New Year's day, Moore broke a glass in the rear door of her apartment and came in and that he was chased out by Emil K. Frenzel, who lived in a room in the same building.

"You were not in the least afraid of him?" asked Webster S. Achey, Moore's attorney.

"No," said the witness.

Then Achey questioned her as to when she made the complaint against Moore.

"On January 13 I came to Doylestown and reported the matter to Mr. Eastburn," the witness stated.

She also said it was not until January 21 that the actual information was sworn out.

"Why did you wait so long when this offense was committed on January 1st," she was asked.

It was at this point Mrs. Crawford revealed that all was not happy in the Justice's home.

"About noon of January 2nd, Mrs. Moore, wife of the defendant, called me up on the telephone and accused me of being out with her husband on New Year's eve. I waited for her to be lady enough to apologize before swearing out the warrant."

"I did it for my own reputation," was the explanation Mrs. Crawford gave for delaying the arrest of the defendant.

E. K. Frenzel then testified. He stated the defendant had liquor on his breath the night he entered Mrs. Crawford's apartment and that he took out a large roll of money from his pocket and gave him a dollar bill and said: "Fix this up for me, don't say anything."

Frenzel said the next day he met him at the Campus Inn and then Moore had said: "I am in a h— of a fix with my wife. I told my wife I was out reporting and I was raising h— instead. Keep it quiet and I'll appreciate it. Anytime you get in trouble I'll fix it up."

Moore took the stand yesterday afternoon and said: "I didn't like the idea of being a burnt offering for a lot of beer runners in Bucks County."

During the trial District Attorney Eastburn stated he had notified the Langhorne Justice of the Peace that his conduct was unbecoming to a member of the minor Judiciary and that his advice would be for him to resign.

When Eastburn questioned Moore he said:

"You promised to resign, did you not?—Have you resigned?"

"Not as yet," Moore replied.

Eastburn continued: "I also told you I wanted you to resign and that I doubted the legality of your holding any future hearings."

"I didn't resign and I don't intend to," Moore stated.

He further said he has received threats through the "grape-vine" and named Kuebler, the proprietor of the Campus Inn, and H. Kleigerman as the sinister shadow behind the "grape-vine."

Under further cross-examination by District Attorney Eastburn, Moore admitted he had been drinking but that he was not drunk. He said something went wrong with his head, that everything went black before his eyes.

The defendant, according to the evidence, was taken along on the raids by state police to prevent "tip-offs." He said he went for his own protection. "I went on these raids to cover up if there was a tip-off."

This morning, the wife of the defendant, Mrs. Mary Moore, took the stand, and she stated she had a conversation over the telephone with Mrs. (Continued on Page 4)

TRANSPORTATION PROBLEMS

Difficult as these days are for all transportation, insuperable as some of the problems seem, impossible as it seems to be to secure an understanding of those problems by a public composed of individuals with problems that seem more personal and more pressing, it is true, nevertheless, that the need for a form of transportation by all the people, and the need for vision, ingenuity, planning, strength and capacity by those who furnish it, are certain to become greater. It is not going too far to apply this prediction to all the generally used forms of transportation in existence today.

No thoughtful man in any community can address himself seriously for 10 minutes to the transit problem without realizing that here is a task not for one man, nor for any single group of men, but for the whole community.

The task of the transportation industry is that of drawing and redrawing, again and again, the pattern of the country's transportation, rebuilding the service to fit the pattern, conducting it efficiently so that it does the work it is expected to do as close to the public ideal as it is possible to conduct it.

The task of the community is to fix a public ideal that is not impossible of achievement.

The task of the government is to regulate without destroying the industry; to protect the shipper and passenger without pampering them.

CARELESS OF THE TRUTH

All men are liars. Not conscious, malicious liars, but unconscious liars, in the sense that their talk and their treatment of issues daily falls short of the exalted ideal of truthfulness that does not admit partial, distorted or exaggerated reports.

The most difficult thing in the world is to recognize a fact when it is a fact and to state a fact truthfully. It is not an easy thing to see a fact clearly. To state it clearly is even harder.

The unconscious liar has inaccurate powers of comprehension or inadequate powers of expression or both. His morals are not at fault. His mind is very like a window which distorts the landscape.

Everybody is acquainted with one or more of his kind. Political campaigns turn the spotlight upon them. The unconscious liar talking politics will condemn the enemy for being careless with the truth and in the next breath will misquote, misinterpret and misunderstand every utterance and policy of the other camp.

Professional lobbyists are often unconscious liars if not conscious liars. It is a habit they form in their zeal for making out a good case for their cause. Truth is of interest to them only when it serves their uses. Half truths and untruths they will cite as truths when it serves their purpose. And impressionable legislators accept it all as gospel truth.

The town cynic says if wishes were horses, they would be in the way.

There still seems to be enough money to maintain the highway congestion.

An enemy is just like a friend, except that you don't understand him as well.

HOLLYWOOD.—Can you picture Robert Montgomery as a wise-cracking Broadway fixer?

Robert Montgomery

For a leading woman, Bob will have the newest contract player on the M-G-M list, Miss Clark. No time is being lost in utilizing this actress. Within less than a week she has been assigned to two films, "Soviet" and the Terrell picture.

Check up and you'll find a vogue right now for these stories giving the lowdown on Broadway. Lee Tracy and Lupe Velez did one in "The Half Naked Truth" and James Cagney and Mary Brian another in "Hard to Handle."

Brisk, modern and wise as a wink, these films cater to a quality inherent in all audiences—the desire to know the inside.

They are quite hysterical out here over the film magnate who summoned a sculptor and ordered him to make a bust of his wife's hand.

HOLLYWOOD PARADE.

Ginger Rogers and Mervyn LeRoy were together again at the Beverly Wilshire Tuesday night, so maybe that romance is not dead after all. . . . Buster Collier was out cold for eight minutes when Jim Mason hit him in what was supposed to be a fake film fight. Buster took it good-naturedly, but laid off work for the rest of the day. . . . We'll not be seeing Lee Tracy around Hollywood for three weeks. He's finished his picture and is going to his ranch at Encinitas for a rest. . . . Loretta Young is another player who's planning travels. She and Ruth Carroll, the interior decorator, sail from here March first for a two months' trip to Honolulu. What does that do to the Bruce Cabot romance? And speaking of romances, the John Considine (Carmen Pantages) and the Al Scotts (Colleen Moore) celebrated their wedding anniversaries on Valentine night at the Coconut Grove. Colleen is still drawing salary from M-G-M and wishing they would give her a part. But then look how long Wallie Beery waited for "The Big House."

There's a little story about Wallie that deserves telling. The other day he went to a hospital to see a friend. As he was passing through the corridor they were rolling a little girl into the operating room. She recognized him and cried out his name. He stopped and talked to her. The youngster was so thrilled that it was the first thing she talked about on coming out of the anaesthetic. They told Wallie and he went to see her. Has been several times since. It doesn't take much guessing to know who's the most popular movie actor in that family. Wonder who had low score in that golf game between Vice President Curtis, Senator Arthur Capper, Buddy Rogers and Walter Johnson? They're all from Kansas. . . . Zita Johann is just waiting for favorable road reports to start motoring to New York. . . . Latest Palm Springs convert is Vivian Tobin. She went down with the Warren Williams to inspect their new desert home. . . . Jackie Marquise, Vanities beauty, has checked in at the Hollywood Plaza and will take a screen test at R-K-O. . . . Rather a surprise to the worshippers of front when Peggy Hopkins Joyce showed up driving her own car, and it of a modest make. The famous blonde has made no attempt to dazzle Hollywood. She dresses well but not flashily and wears no jewelry.

They're going to do right by "The Silver Cord." Laura Hope Crews has been signed to re-create her original role. Irene Dunne is the daughter, you know. And please take note that R-K-O is throwing some fine stories to this actress of late. "Ann Vickers" is a prize, though some of us still want to be convinced that the lovely Irene is the right person to play this militant character.

SYNOPSIS

Tom Leach, pirate terror of the Spanish Main and master of the dread "Black Swan," captures the merchant vessel "The Centaur," bound for England, and kills the captain and crew. Passengers aboard the "Centaur" are Priscilla Harradine, lovely, young daughter of the late Captain-General of the Leeward Isles; Major Sands, her father's elderly aide, who hopes to win her hand and fortune; and the handsome young Frenchman, Charles de Bernis, former lieutenant of the buccaneer, Henry Morgan. The latter reformed and is commissioned by the King of England to rid the seas of pirates. He has tried in vain to capture the elusive Leach. De Bernis, known to Leach of old, protects Priscilla by introducing her as his wife, and the Major, as his brother-in-law. He holds Leach at bay with a promise of great wealth in the form of a Spanish plate fleet scheduled to sail shortly. It is agreed that De Bernis will take command of the "Centaur" and lead Leach to the treasure. The pirate chief reluctantly agrees to De Bernis' suggestion that they career "The Black Swan" to put it in battle order for their coming encounter with the Spaniards. Leach holds his anger towards De Bernis in check, waiting until the treasure is in his hands. Despite the fact that he owes his life to De Bernis, Major Sands is hostile towards the Frenchman, feeling superior to him. When Priscilla reprimands him for his apparent ingratitude, he explains it is due to his concern for her safety. The Major blunderingly tries to make love to Priscilla who, having always considered him one of the family, is stunned. She draws away from his embrace. He explains that he would gladly die for her because of his affection for her and his friendship for her father.

CHAPTER TWENTY-FIVE

With anxious eyes he followed the slim figure, admiring the graceful lines of it, the quiet elegance of her movements, and so waited. She spoke presently, when she had mastered herself.

"Forgive me, Bart. To be sure, I am a little fool. Don't let me appear also an ungrateful one. I owe you so much. I must have died, I think, but for the knowledge that you were standing by me in this awful time. You have made me realize it. It should not have been necessary."

"It is not necessary now," said he, very noble. "Sink me if it is. And then, being a fool, he must go on to spoil it. But I rejoice to hear, at least, that you are no longer in the persuasion that you owe everything to this French rogue."

Now that is just what, in her generous anxiety to make amends for the injustice of her assumption, she had been in danger of forgetting. His words, acting as a sharp reminder, tempered her penitence. But she did not pursue the matter, intent at the moment upon making her peace with him.

She turned, and smiled a little shyly in the consciousness of the enormity of her late assumptions. "Shall we take the air on deck, Bart?"

They went, and beyond the leering eyes of Wogan and Halliwell, on the quarter deck, following her passage thence to the poop, none seemed to notice them.

Monsieur de Bernis was in the captain's cabin, which he had now made his own, astern, on the summit of the poop. He sat with open doors on account of the heat. Seeing their approach, he rose, and came forth, bringing cushions for her day-bed which she found set for her under the awning of sailcloth as it had been before the invasion of the Centaur by her present crew.

When this was done, he lingered on in amiable talk with them, like a courteous host. He mentioned

"With him, too, I learned to fight a ship, and I doubt if there was ever a higher school than his for that," said De Bernis.

their altered course, expressed a hope that the breeze might hold, spoke of their destination and the purpose for which they sought the Albuquerque Keys, and in answer to Miss Priscilla's questions regretted that circumstances would delay them there for the best part of a month.

The Major, morose, sat on the tail of the day-bed, of which Miss Priscilla occupied the head, making no contribution to the talk. The notion of spending a month at the Albuquerque filled him with disgust and indignation, and it was only by the exercise of all his powers of repression that he avoided saying so. The cool tone in which De Bernis made the announcement appeared to him as a climax of impudence. And it added fuel to his indignation to observe that Miss Priscilla did not appear to share his feelings. She seemed to accept the situation with a resignation that went very near complacency.

His disgust reached its apex at a question which he heard her ask in a tone of quiet wonder. "Monsieur de Bernis, how did you become a buccaneer?"

Monsieur de Bernis seemed startled by this question, coming so abruptly. He smiled a little as he looked down at her.

"You ask almost as if the fact were difficult to understand. It is a compliment, I suppose. But can you really be interested to know?"

"Should I ask such a question if I were not? The interest must be strong that drives me to an impertinence."

"Not an impertinence," he protested quietly. "Most pertinent since your present situation depends so much upon the fact." He paused a moment, and the long narrow face was overcast with thought, the dark eyes grew almost wistful. "After all, there is so little that you do not know already. Did I not tell you that the Sieur Simon, whom the Spaniards killed on Santa Catalina, was my uncle? I had come out with him to the New World, in quest of the liberty of action denied me at home in the Old. But there was no thought of lawlessness in my mind. We are, Huguenots, we Bernis, from the Toulouse, and for a Huguenot in France there was only toleration. Today, since the King has revoked the Edict of Nantes, there is not even that. But already when I was a boy there were few opportunities for a Huguenot to find advancement in any career that was open to a gentleman.

"I was the youngest of seven sons, and a career was necessary to me. And so I took the chance my uncle offered me of seeking it in the New World. When he was killed at Santa Catalina, I was alone out here, without possessions and without friends, saving those poor fellows who had escaped with me. With them I went to join Morgan. Nothing else offered. Besides, the massacre on Santa Catalina had bred in me such a hatred of Spaniards that I was glad enough to march in any company that was hostile to Spain.

"With Morgan my rise was rapid. Birth, if it does nothing else for a man, will at least equip him for leadership. Opportunity served me, and I knew how to seize it. I showed Morgan that I knew how to make men follow me. My nationality, too, once I had displayed the gift of leadership, made me valuable to Morgan with whom there was always a considerable French contingent. I became his lieutenant, in command of his French following. With him, too, I learned to fight a ship, and I doubt if there was ever a higher school than his for that.

"When England's affairs ceased to justify her encouragement of the buccaneers, and Morgan decided to accept the governorship of Jamaica, I went with him, and took service with him under the English Crown. After all, there was no man living whom Morgan trusted as fully as he trusted me." He smiled down upon her as he ceased. "That is all," he said.

"So that," she commented thoughtfully, "your career is hardly to be spoken of as lawless, seeing that you ceased to be a buccaneer once buccaneers were declared to be without the law."

But this was too much for Major Sands. "If that was true once," was his frosty interjection, "it is unfortunately true no longer."

Monsieur de Bernis laughed, as he turned to depart. "But why unfortunately, Major? You, at least, should regard it as extremely fortunate."

THE other day a friend gave my wife a recipe for a new Frozen Orange Pudding. We had it last night for dessert.

"This is something new," I said. "Where did you get it?"

"Mae gave me the recipe yesterday. She clipped it from an advertisement."

My wife didn't read that advertisement. If her friend hadn't read it what a treat we would have missed.

Do you read the advertisements? It will pay you many times over to do so. From them you may learn about all sorts of new things. New foods, new ways to use them, new recipes that will add variety to the daily menu.

Right in the advertisements in this paper there are countless things to interest you, to save you money, to bring you the most value for what you spend. And now as a reward for reading this advertisement here is the recipe that inspired it.

RECIPE FOR FROZEN ORANGE PUDDING

Ingredients. 2 egg yolks (beaten); 1 cup orange juice; 1 cup cream (light cream of top milk will do); 4 teaspoonfuls flour; 1/8 teaspoonful salt; 1/3 cup sugar; 1 teaspoonful grated orange rind.

Blend thoroughly egg yolks, sugar, flour, salt and add orange juice and cream. Put in double boiler until thick. Add orange rind, cool and pour into freezing tray of refrigerator — or three or four hours on ice. When ready to serve, top each dish with meringue made by beating two egg whites stiff and adding 1/4 cup sugar. Garnish with orange segments.

PARIS HAS NEW HAT TO MAKE A LITTLE WOMAN APPEAR TALL

Sugar-Bag Satin Hat is Newest Solution of Spring Headgear

By Alice Langeller
(I. N. S. Staff Correspondent)
PARIS.—The sugar-bag satin hat is the newest solution of spring headgear, suggesting the old silk topper or opera hat.

It is positively exciting, so high-crowned and cuff-brimmed and will give new height to any smart woman and accentuate her fashionable slenderness.

Down on the eyes, the cuffed band is slightly draped and rises to a great peak in the back. It will take some practice to wear by young things accustomed to several seasons of the slouch beret and other easy-going hats.

Another new shape comes by way of Italian Alpine inspiration like the fuzzy felts the soldiers wear, even with the cock feather, but sticking up in back.

It comes in straw and tilts over the right eye in slightly sinister style, requiring a close, sleek coiffure to set it off properly.

The wish for something easy for the women to wear and at the same time, easy for the men to look at, has brought out a revival of the old-fashioned turban.

It gives good room for individual taste in designing and draping and beautifies faces that, in the ordinary way, are really not pretty. For the woman who won't see things again, they are supremely smart, simply because they have a certain poise and distinction.

Fine felts, feathers and fabrics like the truck are used for them.

Rose Valois is showing one in half-brim effect in jersey of two shades of brown and beige.

A small black straw turban recently seen at one of the modistes has enormous plumes a foot high and an enormous brush of osprey looking like a hussar's plume perched in the centre-front of a soft beige picot turban.

Y. M. A. TAKES FIRST OF THREE-GAME SERIES

(By T. M. Juno)

Before a capacity house, the Y. M. A. basketball five won the first of a three game series to determine the championship of the Bristol Basketball League last night on the Italian Mutual Aid Court. The Third Ward A. C., winners of the second half pennant, were the victims with the final count being 37-31.

It was field goals by "Reds" Bailey and "Dates" Fegely, both made via the "sleeper" method that enabled the Radcliffe street boys to capture the fray. On both plays "Bill" Hardy picked the ball out of a scrimmage to pass to the boys staying under the basket.

Prior to the winning goals, the score had been deadlocked on four occasions and each club had broken the tie twice. The last time came with but two and one-half minutes of playing when the double-deckers were scored by Bailey and Fegely.

"Henny" Morgan, who was brilliant for the Warders last night, had put his club into the lead by a field goal and then by putting in a foul when struck shooting the ball. "Toby" Lawrence, however, soon deadlocked the score by sinking in two fouls which paved the way to a Y. M. A. triumph.

Crisis Expected In Cuba Before Summer

Informed by a national police force of some 10,000 more. The jails and penitentiaries are filled with political prisoners. Student meetings and labor rallies are consistently being broken up.

The most reliable reports in Havana are to the effect that some 150 to 200 of the opposition have been "bumped off" by Machado soldiery and police in the disturbances. The number of Machadoists killed is reported to be far less.

It is the opinion of conservative American business men in the island that these conditions cannot continue indefinitely, that a crisis is bound to develop before long. Most of them believe it will come within the first six months of the Roosevelt administration, and that the new President will be forced to determine a policy with regard to Cuba.

Not all American opinion in the island is critical of Machado—but most of it is.

PATERSON PAPER FIVE ARE EASILY DEFEATED

(By T. M. Juno)

The Paterson Parchment Paper Company basketball quintet was no match for the Hibernians last night in the preliminary game to the Y. M. A. Third Ward classic. The Big Green walked away with a 41-27 victory.

The "Hibs" after a listless first half went right to work in the second part of the game and rolled in point after point to swamp the Paper Makers who after a gallant first half battle had faltered to the passing of the Hibernian team.

At half time, "Spade" Spadacino dropped two fouls into the net to give the Paper Mill team a 14-13 lead. Immediately after the second half whistle had blown the Big Green, twice the runner-up in the half races, piled up a substantial majority of points.

"Gige" Dougherty was leader of the Corson Street boys' shooting with 12 points, all made by field goals. Spadacino led the losers with eleven points, made by three twin-pointers and five fouls.

The box score:	Hibernians	Fd. G.	Fl. G.	Pts.
G. Dougherty f	6	0	12	12
Downs f	1	1	3	3
Lawler f	3	0	6	6
Roe c	3	2	8	8
Mulligan g	3	0	6	6
J. Dougherty g	3	0	6	6

HIGH SCHOOL TEAMS TO PLAY AT WILLOW GROVE

(This is the fifth of a series of ten articles to be written about the individual members of the Bristol High School basketball team.)

By Oscar Corn
(H. S. Press Representative)
Tonight the Cardinal and Gray Varsity and Jay Vee quintets will travel to Willow Grove where they will meet the Upper Moreland fives. Last week the varsity defeated this team but the Jay Vees lost. Tonight they will try to turn in a pair of victories. At forward Coach Dougherty will likely start, with "Dick" Brown, the popular freshman, "Joe" Roe.

Joseph Leonard Roe, in full, is playing his first year in varsity basketball competition as he is a Freshman. He plays well at forward as he is an excellent shot; he also plays guard and at this position he is also successful. "Joe" Roe was born in Bristol January 29, 1916, and has lived and grown up in the fourth ward. Here he is the most popular and best liked of fellows. He is also active in sports.

Although only a sophomore he has been able to earn his letter in football, in which he played quarterback, and is likely to get a letter for basketball. He has also played one year on the Junior Varsity football and basketball teams. This year he plans to go out for baseball also.

In all games in which he has taken part this year, Roe has given an outstanding performance. In fact he is always a sure way to add a few points to the final score.

Mr. and Mrs. Walter Fagan and family will move from 1312 to 1322 Pond street.

SPORT SHOTS by Maxwell Gordon

DO YOU KNOW THAT... Joe Haines, son of Dr. W. Albertson Haines, of Edgely, participated in the Pennsylvania-New Jersey Prep School mid-winter boxing and wrestling tournament last Saturday at the Hun School in Princeton? "Little Doe" as young Haines is called by his friends, represented the 145 pound boxing class from George School, where he is a student.

Coach Sutton from the Bucks County school, had two wrestling teams and a boxing team in the tournament which included one hundred sixty athletes from all the principal preparatory schools in the two states.

And George School won the wrestling events defeating Valley Forge Military Academy... the margin of victory was 32 points to 8... Hun School and Rutgers Prep shared the honors in the boxing events before a large enthusiastic crowd.

Norman H. Moore, Peace Justice, Goes On Trial

Crawford and all she asked her was, "Who was my husband with that night?" and that Mrs. Crawford had answered, "He was by himself." Mrs. Moore denied Mrs. Crawford told her that she was out with him until 4 a. m. She also denied she left her husband on account of this case and then came back with him.

Testifying further she said: "When he got home that morning his mental condition was in a fog."

Character witnesses testified as to Moore's reputation, as that of a gentleman, according to Paul Vansant, Wilmer Black, Langhorne, Constable Samuel Lenington, Langhorne Manor, John M. Beldier and C. Taylor Knight.

District Attorney Eastburn was asked to take the stand this morning by the defense for cross-examination. Eastburn said he had no other reason for suggesting to Moore that he resign than the contents of four affidavits which he had in his office, the contents of which he said in his judgment made Moore look as though he performed conduct unbecoming to an officer.

"I not only suggested to Moore that he resign," Eastburn said, "but Moore himself agreed to it."

One of the affidavits mentioned in the case was sworn to by Peter Kuebler now serving a term in jail, the result of a raid on the Campus Inn.

Eastburn related the entire story, particularly the point that he had advised Moore of these affidavits. The defense asked that the affidavits be produced and Mr. Eastburn produced them.

The defense offered them in evidence but the Court ruled them out. Peter Kuebler was called in rebuttal and testified that Moore did have a bottle of whiskey with him at the Campus Inn.

"You are the person who started this, are you not?" Achey asked Kuebler in cross examination.

"I am not," Kuebler answered. Both sides closed their cases shortly after Kuebler's cross-examination and the jury will be charged this afternoon.

OUT OF TOWN

Mrs. Joseph David, Wilson avenue, left Friday for Ogdensburg, N. Y., where she will make an extended visit with her sister.

Mrs. James Ridge and Mrs. J. Stewart Woodruff, Madison street, spent Thursday in New Egypt, N. J., visiting relatives of Mrs. Woodruff.

Mr. and Mrs. William King, Edgely, spent Sunday in Trenton at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Wesley Blinn. Mrs. John Tomlinson, mother of Mrs. King and Mrs. Blinn, who has been making an extended visit with Mr. and Mrs. Blinn, has been ill during the past few weeks.

Adolph Gratz, 327 Taft street, is spending some time visiting Mr. and Mrs. H. Killian, Tullytown.

night following a series of conferences held during the preceding 12 hours by Governor Pinchot with leading bankers of the state, members of his cabinet and representative legislators.

When the last of the conference ended, the Senate caucused to assure the unanimous consent necessary for immediate consideration of the resolution on the floor. Senator Andrew Sordani, Luzerne, then formally introduced the measure, the rules were suspended and passage was promptly effected.

The resolution was messaged to the House which cast aside all other action before it and immediate consideration was granted. Only a majority vote was necessary in the lower branch and this was assured during a 45-minute recess. When the resolution was put to a viva voce vote, there was a resounding chorus of ayes.

"Those opposed?" boomed the speaker. There was a hush.

Not a voice was raised in dissent. At 11:45 the measure had the approval of both houses in record time.

Legislation today was to start over the same course as the resolution in order to meet constitutional requirements. Senator Sordani was scheduled to introduce the bill.

At the conference with Governor Pinchot last night, Senator John J. McClure, Delaware, organization Republican, offered the motion providing that the resolution be submitted immediately to the General Assembly for consideration. Senator Frank Harris, of Allegheny, allied with the Pinchot group, seconded the motion.

Legislation passed by Congress last week makes the banking plan applicable to national banks in Pennsylvania as well as to the state banks.

Former Kaiser Lives As In The Past

to his requirements. The gateway is not an ordinary entrance, but a beautiful two-story building which is constructed in feudal Dutch style, low-lying and with quaint window shutters. Here are located the business and secretarial offices of the Kaiser's entourage, where the secretaries of the former ruler and the Kaiserin and their stenographers work. They ordinarily don't get any nearer the royal presence than this gate itself!

Let us enter this gateway. A uniformed imperial guard ushers you—if you have the proper credentials—into the gate-house.

But what a gate-house! Rather a museum. The walls of a circular stairway are covered with paintings—the proper sort of paintings. The imperial German navy at review, beautiful white ships with festive flagging; proud imperial horsemen holding their steeds at bay; victorious imperial cavalry stamping over the prostrate forms of the enemy.

An impressive study of the ex-Kaiser, fierce countenance and medals, with a gilt crest on the frame, stares at you above a table. Elsewhere are crests mounted on knightly shields, all sorts of mythical birds designating family trees.

A winsome stenographer peeks at you through a dainty bull's-eye window cut into an opposite wall. After another official presentation of visiting cards and credentials, and if you are lucky, one of the titled palace officials will come out to see you.

You feel once more like "Alice Through the Looking Glass." This man—and most of the men at Doorn would make good doubles for Adolphe Menjou—goes up close to you, takes out a monocle and without speaking inspects you from the port side. Then, adjusting his monocle more firmly, he inspects you from the starboard side. Finally he speaks. "What do you want?"

By that time you have been put properly in your place. You, or the little of you that is left, now know that you are in an imperial court. You forget for a moment that it is a make-believe court, while hearing a few references made to "His Imperial Majesty the Kaiser."

A huge automobile silently glides in front of the gateway from the interior. Your inquisitor forgets you in his haste to rush to its side, where within sits a beautiful harpness or some other kind of an "ess" bidding farewell after a drive up from Germany.

Authors of books of etiquette could learn lessons here on the art of expressing farewell.

So far, you have succeeded only in getting to the gate. That's as far as most anybody does get.

(In tomorrow's article Mr. Hunter will tell about the former Kaiser's wood-splitting exercises, giving a close-up glimpse of the Palace Doorn.)

Before long, you'll be seeing the screen's newest romantic team, Dorothy Jordan and Joel McCrea.

Their first picture may be "Little Clown Lost," a Barry Benefield novel which Wilbur Daniel Steele calls "the finest sentimental romance I have ever read." Mr. Steele, one of the outstanding short story writers in the world, is now out here for the screen.

R-K-O. He's adapting the novel for the screen. Of course, you've heard that Dorothy Jordan is going around with Merian C. Cooper, the new production boss at R-K-O. With him to see that she gets good roles, Dorothy will have a chance to make Clarksville, Tenn., proud of her.

And the opportunity will not be long in coming. Radio has bought another story for this team, "Rafter Romance." So far, it's a toss-up which picture will be produced first.

Dozens of stories are told of the Marx brothers' conferences. Latest is about the writer who was submitting dialogue for their approval. He read a six line speech. They asked him what it was for. "Zeppo," he replied. "Cut it down to 'Well, er,' snapped Groucho.

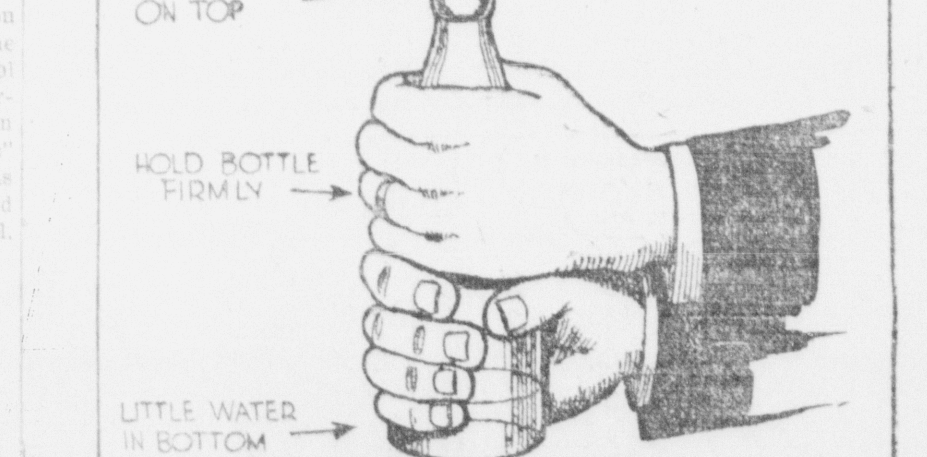

HOLLYWOOD PARADE.
One who'll mourn Mrs. Antonio Moreno greatly is Eleanor Holm, swimming and screen star, who was her protegee. Eleanor left here Tuesday night on the Warner Brothers' "Forty-second Street" special train. They told her of the fatal automobile accident just before she went on a Denver stage.

Lola Lane isn't waiting to spend her $35,000 divorce settlement before returning to pictures. She's up now for a part in Fox's "Husbands Cost Money." Sharon Lynne is another making tests for this picture.

TRICKS of MAGIC EXPLAINED by Will L. Lindhorst

USE SODA BOTTLE AND DIME TO PRODUCE MYSTIC TRICK

Pour a little water into a small soda bottle and place a dime on top of the bottle. With your hand on the dime tip the bottle so that the water inside will form a bubble under the dime. Then grasp the bottle with both hands, holding it firmly and the dime on top will begin to move. In covering the bottle with the hands heat is produced inside and this mixing with the water forms a combustion. In seeking an outlet this combustion causes the dime to move on top of the bottle much in the manner that steam inside a kettle will cause the lid to buckle.
